Case History: Chronic Shoulder Pain (Frozen Shoulder)

Patient:

Female, 52 years old

Complaint: Left shoulder pain for 8 months, aggravated at night, difficulty raising arm above head

Associated symptoms: Stiffness, mild neck tension, occasional tingling in left hand

Medical history: Menopause onset 2 years ago, mild insomnia

Tongue: Pale with thin white coat

Pulse: Wiry, slightly weak

TCM Diagnosis:

Bi Syndrome (Wind-Cold-Damp invasion in shoulder joint, with underlying Liver Blood and Kidney Yin deficiency)

Stagnation of Qi and Blood in the Large Intestine, Small Intestine, and San Jiao channels along the shoulder

Treatment Principle:

Move Qi and Blood in the affected channels

Expel Wind-Cold-Damp from the shoulder joint

Nourish Liver Blood and Kidney Yin for tendon & joint health

Acupuncture Prescription:

Tung Points:

33.08 (Middle Three Needles) – Strong local & distal effect for shoulder mobility

33.09 (Upper Three Needles) – Relieves shoulder stiffness and pain

33.10 (Shoulder Middle) – Activates circulation in shoulder joint

Corresponding TCM Points:

LI15 (Jianyu) – Local point for shoulder pain

SJ14 (Jianliao) – Clears obstruction in San Jiao channel

SI9 (Jianzhen) – Unblocks Small Intestine channel in the shoulder

LI4 (Hegu) – Moves Qi & Blood in upper limbs, clears channel stagnation

Functions:

LI15, SJ14, SI9: Disperse local swelling, release contracture

LI4: Command point for face & upper body, moves Qi strongly

Tung 33.08 & 33.09: Clear pain by moving Qi in Large Intestine channel pathway

Tung 33.10: Specifically increases shoulder joint range of motion

Treatment Course & Outcome:

Sessions: 2 times per week for 4 weeks

Progress:

After 2 sessions: Pain intensity decreased from 8/10 to 5/10

After 6 sessions: Could lift arm to 120° without severe pain

After 8 sessions: Full arm elevation achieved, only mild stiffness in mornings

Follow-up: Maintenance treatment once every 2 weeks for 2 months; no recurrence at 6-month review
